VOLUME 4 NUMBER 20

Pennington Recovering Well

By Dave Atkins

City Councilman Ellis Pennington has just returned home from the hospital where he underwent gallbladder surgery. The operation was a success, but he is still hurting a little, and it will be a few weeks before he will be able to resume his normal lifestyle.

As many of you may remember, the Councilman underwent surgery for lung cancer not long ago, and has since made a full recovery from that.

Pennington says he's tired of all this foolin' around in hospitals, and is looking forward to campaigning hard this summer for the Council elections coming up this fall.

Speaking of elections, it is rumored that the number of people running for City Council this fall will be larger than usual. In fact, if everyone who has told me they intend to run actually does, we'll have to have a primary this year.

And speaking of City Council, I'd like to remind all of you that Council meetings are broadcast live on cable channel 40 or 43. Watch them; you can find out a lot about what is (or isn't) going on in the City.

And speaking of televised meetings, I have decided that, since school is so close to closing for the summer, I will hold off on televising the Board of Education meetings for the time being, but, when school resumes in September, you'll be able to watch them on a one-day-delay basis. (That's because the School Board and City Council meet at the same time.) □

Local Update To Air Soon

By Dave Atkins

Back in January, I reported that a new program called Romulus Update would air sometime in February. Unfortunately, a combination of the "short" help here at the Paper and the "long" quantities of videotape it is taking to make the program possible prevented me from keeping to that schedule. It now appears that Update will not be ready to air until around the end of April or the first of May.

The format of Romulus Update will be similar to that of this newspaper: it will be about Romulus, and who and/or what is affecting Romulus. The first few

One of the greatest sources of frustration for parents and teachers is when a student does not achieve to his potential. We call such children underachievers and it has been estimated that nearly half of all students fall into this category. Of course, it is unreasonable to expect that anyone — child or adult — will push himself to his maximum potential every moment of the day, but if you suspect that your child is performing significantly below his ability and in several areas, your child likely has a problem that should be addressed.

How to spot an underachiever? We are not talking about children who do not earn all A's all the time. Many children who earn B's are doing the best they can. We are also not talking about children with diagnosed learning disabilities. Ask these questions about your child's performance:

- Is his work frequently sloppy and illegible?
- Does he often fail to complete assignments, or does he turn them in late?
- Is he having trouble keeping up with the class?
- Is he disorganized at school and at home?
- Does he avoid challenges at school and in other areas of his life?

programs will be taped, but I hope that, eventually, I will be able to bring it to you live from someplace in Town where we can have a live audience and get your reactions — live and on camera.

Originally, I thought of calling the show The Romulus News Hot Seat (that should give you some idea of what the program will be like), but the name Romulus Update seems a little more appropriate.

Give me a little time to get it all together, and I'm sure that you'll enjoy it as much as the newspaper you are now reading. The show will be honest and straightforward and, at times, hard hitting! Watch this paper for the starting date and time, to be announced soon. □

Underachieving Children Can Be Helped

- Is he easily discouraged/frustrated?
- Does he lack pride in his work?
- Does he lack self-confidence?

Do not be alarmed over an occasional missed assignment or bad day, but if your child exhibits these behaviors on a regular basis, he is not achieving to a reasonable potential. If you suspect your child is having a problem, be sure to schedule a conference with his teacher, who may have insights and ideas to help you more clearly identify the problem and find a way to combat it.

Why would a child become an underachiever? There are several possible causes.

- Learning Problems: Your child may have poor study skills, reading or writing difficulties, or an inability to concentrate. Another common problem is disorganization. If any of these seem to be the case, spend time with your child, showing him how to study, how to organize his work and manage his time. If reading and writing are a problem, a meeting with his teacher will help you learn what strategies she is taking so you can reinforce that effort at home.
- Family Issues: When a family is going through a separation, divorce, illness or other trauma, a child's ability to concentrate is disrupted. If your family is undergoing a difficult time, your child may need special attention or counseling.

• Emotional Problems: A child with poor self-esteem or unresolved anger or fear cannot do his best at school. Sometimes children are so afraid of failing — or of succeeding — that they decide not to try. Your child may even be using poor school performance as a signal that he is in distress. If you suspect your child is having such problems, counseling may be necessary.

• Outside Influences: Sometimes a child becomes convinced that it is not "cool" or desirable to study or do well in school. You may need to take a close look at the attitudes of his friends.

Children who underachieve are often afraid to test their limits and create barriers for themselves that almost ensure failure. You can help by refusing to accept excuses for sloppy work or irresponsibility. Be especially careful not to resign yourself to low expectations if you feel your child is capable of more than he is doing; such an attitude only reinforces poor self-esteem.

Symptoms of underachievement can be subtle and difficult to detect. The best approach is to carefully monitor your child's work, ask him and yourself honest questions to uncover possible problems, be understanding of occasional slips, and work with the teacher and school if you suspect a serious problem.

They Did It One More Time After 50 Years!

Frederick and Helen Hay celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary on Saturday, March 30, 1991. Over 200 friends and relatives attended the celebration at the Progressive Hall, which was decorated with gold balloons and a three-tiered wedding cake. The evening began with a buffet dinner at 6 p.m., followed by a wedding ceremony in which the couple reaffirmed their wedding vows. Later, the guests enjoyed dancing to the music of the Wegienka band, the same band that played for their wedding reception 50 years ago.

Fred and Helen have four children: Pearl Varner, Margie Baird, Frederick M. Hay, and Carla Cox. Their five grandsons are Don Herrmann, Marc Herrmann, Darius Varner, Lloyd Varner, and William Cox. □

The Editor's Opinion

Editorial

By Dave Atkins

It seems like only yesterday that I wrote an editorial very similar to the one you are about to read. What was the subject of that editorial? Party stores!

There are so many party stores in this town that someone could very easily call Romulus "the party town of the Lower Peninsula."

I have forgotten exactly how many party stores we have now, but, rest assured, there are plenty of them — and more to come.

Fred and Mary's is about to reopen in its original location across from the Golden Gallon (which Fred and Mary sold not so very long ago), just down the street from the Silver Bullet Bar and Walter's Bar. The same owners of Fred and Mary's are also opening another store at the corner of Northline and Huron River Drive — again, not far from the Silver Bullet and Walter's. I have also heard that yet another party store may be opened about a block or so further down the street, where the old John Deere store used to be.

I understand that, in this country, everyone has a right to own any kind of business that he or she wishes, providing that they conform to all rules and regulations, but this is getting just a little outrageous.

Someone goes out of business and a party store pops up.

Someone sells his/her party store, and soon that same person is opening one or even two new stores in direct competition with the people to whom the original store was sold.

Everywhere you turn, there are more stores selling booze, providing more places for minors to buy it — and some will sell it, no matter what is said and/or promised by the owners.

Yes, there is a need for party stores because most regular grocery stores are not open until all hours of the night. But, once again, stop and think! At the corner of Wayne and Ecorse Road, there are two bars: Memories and the City Lounge. About a half mile further south on Wayne Road is Kegger's Party Store, another half mile south of there is a drug store that sells liquor, and a quarter mile from there is R.J.'s Party Store. That is five establishments that sell booze in a stretch of just a little over two miles.

Turn west on Goddard from Wayne Road, and you'll find the Landing Strip, the Romulus IGA, and Mike's Party Store, all within a two-block area. And about a mile further down the road, heading toward Five Points, is the Polka-Dot Party Pantry.

Moving on from the Polka-Dot to Huron River Drive, there's the Silver Bullet Bar, Walter's Bar, the Golden Gallon, and the soon-to-be-reopened Fred and Mary's. That's another four within approximately a half mile of each other.

And if you travel further south on Huron River Drive, you'll find another place preparing to open as a party store ('scuse me, convenience store) and (it's rumored) still another opening a block from there, at the old John Deere site.

In fact, the number of party stores in this town has grown so much that the area is beginning to look like old Livernois did with its used-car lots.

Now, folks, I have named only a few of the places that sell booze in this town. If I listed them all, you would probably fall out of your chair! Check it out sometime. The awful part of it all is that the City can do absolutely nothing about it as long as these people abide by the laws and building codes. □

Letter to the Editor

Cough! Cough! I Need Your Help!

(Cough. Cough.) I need your help! I am a student at Romulus High School. I think it is wrong that this school has a smoking area for its students. (There is — I am not kidding you, Mr. Atkins — more than tobacco being puffed out there.)

The Romulus School Board allows this to continue to exist. It would be even tougher to convince these so-called educational leaders of our community about the hazards of smoking because most of them smoke right through their own School Board meetings. How can one go to a School Board meeting to complain about smoking if one cannot breathe the smoky air in the meeting room?

It is against Michigan law for minors to smoke in public. It is against Michigan law for smoking to occur at a public meeting. There are plenty of minors smoking at the High School, in their very own supervised area. There are plenty of smokers at our School Board meetings. Why is the law ignored in Romulus?

Can you print my letter? Maybe our principals will read it. Maybe the smokestacks on the Board of Education will read it. There's always hope.

Thank you.

Ten tips to ease tax time

NOW IS THE TIME to develop an organizational system to update financial records and keep them organized throughout tax season and the entire year.

It's tax season — and what a taxing time it can be. Whether you do your own taxes or hire a professional, sorting through records and locating receipts can be extremely frustrating. If you're like most people, each year you again resolve to find a better system for filing papers and keeping your records in an orderly fashion.

Organizing paperwork, files and family records doesn't have to be difficult. The key is to find a system that is easy to follow and sufficiently thorough to cover all relevant topics. Once you have a system, it's easy to keep records updated and organized for a lifetime.

Clifton Fichtner, a leading personal planning consultant, has created a list of ten simple steps each of us can follow to become more organized for the tax season and beyond. Here are his suggestions:

- 1) Centralize your records
- 2) Create alphabetical files
- 3) Lease a safe-deposit box
- 4) Log your family's data
- 5) Record your family history
- 6) Prepare your will
- 7) Establish a key file
- 8) Compile a property inventory
- 9) Photograph household possessions

10) Keep duplicate sets of important documents.

Fichtner is the author of the Family Records Portfolio, which helps families of any size maintain all important documents and family information. The Portfolio contains four major sections for organizing, recording and filing information to help every family deal with insurance issues, financial planning, and unforeseen emergencies. It includes ready-made forms to organize bank accounts, sources of income, insurance and property documents, household inventory lists, names and addresses of professional consultants, medical history, credit card data, genealogy and much more.

Before you start filling out those tax forms this spring, set up a system to get organized. As years pass and you keep your files and records updated, you will find reporting to the tax man can be a little less painful. To find out more about the Family Records Portfolio, write to Family Records, Dept. Tax Tips, P.O. Box 777, Old Greenwich, CT 06870 or phone 1-800-331-7500. The cost of the portfolio is $29.95 plus $3.50 shipping and handling. A free brochure titled "Ten Tips for Better Family Records" is available by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the same address.

A kindergarten screening for children residing in the Barth area who will be five years old before December 1, 1991, will be held on May 15. Call the school for more information.

Free Lecture

"Bones and the Law," a fascinating look at the science of forensics and how it helps to identify human remains in criminal investigation, will be the subject of a free lecture sponsored by the Wayne County Community College (WCCC) on Wednesday, April 17. It will be held in the Atrium of WCCC's Western Campus (9555 Haggerty Road, Belleville) beginning at 7 p.m.

Teenage Crash Profile

Submitted by Officer Rick Schwartz,
Romulus Police Department
Introduction

Traffic crashes have been described as the neglected epidemic. They are one of the leading causes of death and injury for teen drivers. In southeast Michigan, 107 teenagers are killed due to traffic accidents each year. SEMCOG completed a study of the Southeast Michigan Traffic Crash Profile in 1989. This report generated considerable discussion and interest in traffic safety, especially in southeast Michigan. As a follow-up to that study, Project Graduation, a safety advocacy group devoted to improving the safety of teenage drivers, requested that SEMCOG study teenage accidents in greater detail. Following are some of the significant findings of the study on teenage crashes.

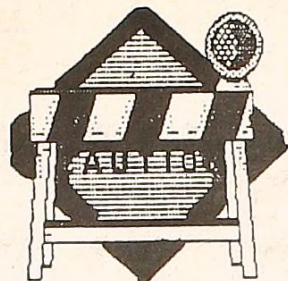

Driving Characteristics

Hazardous driving actions by teens directly endanger their lives and the lives of other motorists. Teenage drivers make up only 7.5% of the driving population, but receive 28% of all the reckless-driving convictions in the State and are involved in 15% of all traffic accidents occurring in southeast Michigan.

Specifically:

- Almost half of the teen drivers involved in traffic crashes are cited for hazardous driving actions. This is particularly true for the under-15-years-old driver, who is cited 82% of the time.
- Teenage drivers are overrepresented in almost every driver conviction category. Hazardous driving actions such as joyriding or recklessness and driving licensing violations such as driving without a license or with a suspended license represent 28% and 21%, respectively, of all convictions received for traffic-related offenses.
- When the vehicle miles travelled is accounted for, the 16-year-old driver is four times more likely to be involved in a traffic accident and convicted for a traffic offense than a driver between 35 and 44 years of age.

Crash Involvement

Seat-belt use is a very effective method of reducing serious injuries and fatalities for the teen driver.

The use of seat belts reduces the level of severity in teen drivers' accidents. For example, only 4.7% of the teen drivers who wore their belts were killed or injured. This percentage jumps to 17.2% for the teen drivers who did not wear a safety belt. The likelihood of having serious injuries as a result of traffic crashes is at least three times higher for teenage drivers not wearing safety belts.

Most of the teen-driver crashes occur on local streets. In many instances, traffic safety programs are usually focused on the young driver travelling to a spring-break vacation or across the Country. However, teen-driver crashes are substantially higher on local roads within the community.

Alcohol-related Crashes

Teenage drivers exhibit a similar alcohol-accident-involvement rate as the rest of the driving population; however, there are pronounced differences on the consequences associated with driving under the influence of alcohol for the teenage driver. These trends may be the result of driver inexperience and inability to prudently assess risks.

As would be expected, the teen driver's involvement in alcohol-related accidents during the weekdays is relatively low, and peaks on the weekends. For instance, 17-year-old drivers experience 71% of their alcohol-related accidents on the weekends.

When alcohol is involved in a traffic crash, teen drivers have more difficulty than older drivers do when it comes to controlling the vehicle. The teen driver is four times more likely to run off the road when alcohol is involved. This group is 21% more likely to hit an object and twice as likely to hit objects such as trees or mailboxes in alcohol-related accidents than older drivers are. This is particularly true for the most inexperienced of the teen drivers, the under-16 age group. These teen drivers are 3.5 times more likely to hit such objects than are older drivers.

Injury

Traffic crashes are still the number-one cause of injury and death for people in the 15-to-19 age group, and teen drivers are overly represented in fatal and injury accidents. This is particularly true of the under-15 age group, who experience 7.4% of the fatalities and 7.5% of the injuries (included in this driver group are drivers of motorcycles and mopeds).

Teen drivers are at least two times more likely to be involved in a fatal crash and at least three times more likely to be involved in an injury crash than are drivers between the ages of 25 and 34. This is particularly true for the under-16 age group, who are killed or injured 75% of the time.

Conclusion

Over $225 million is lost every year as a result of crash fatalities and injuries experienced by the 16- to 19-year-old age group in southeast Michigan. However, these costs do not accurately reflect the true costs related to such tragedies, especially in regard to the physical and emotional suffering experienced by the victims and their families. These teens had yet to reach the prime of their lives, and had little or no chance to contribute to society.

The results of this study do not suggest any specific solution. However, they strongly imply that implementation of a combination of improvements could contribute to the reduction of teen-driver accidents. In order to properly address the reasons behind the data and the potential solutions, a comprehensive and coordinated program reviewing all aspects of these problems and solutions should be undertaken. □

Tidbits

"Switchin' in the Kitchen"

Most of us work eight to 10 hours a day, so we don't always feel like "switchin' in the kitchen." All we want to do is pull a meal out of the refrigerator and pop it into the microwave. But, since your husband took you out to dinner Friday night and you're feeling rested, let's do a little "switchin' in the kitchen."

When I'm in the kitchen, I like to look nice, wearing make-up (in light, daytime tones), stretch pants, and a cute pullover shirt. (Of course, you know the reason for this, right?)

It's time to prepare a wonderful meal, with the main ingredient being TLC (tender loving care). Our menu:

- barbecue country spareribs
- mashed potatoes
- Brussels sprouts
- dessert (be careful about this part): strawberry shortcake (for those who don't have to worry about calories) or Jell-o (for the rest of us who do)

First, always wash meat and vegetables very carefully (but I don't have to tell you that, right?). Trim most of the fat away from the spareribs, then soak them in wine vinegar. Next, rub your meat on both sides with garlic pods, and sprinkle with paprika, seasoned salt, Cajun seasoning, and black pepper. Refrigerate in a covered shallow dish for at least an hour.

Place meat, lean side down (allowing the juices to drain down to the lean portion, making it tender and tasty), on a rack in the roaster at 350°F. (This way, the meat will cook evenly.) Lay a diced, medium-size onion on the top, and pour a half cup of beer over it to spruce up the taste. Brush on barbecue sauce when the meat is over halfway done. Continue cooking a couple of hours until brown and tender.

Since this is your TLC meal, instead of using instant potatoes, go with real potatoes, whipping until smooth, adding milk, butter, and light salt to taste.

Brussels sprouts are delicious fresh or frozen. If you are using fresh Brussels sprouts, snip off the little brown stub on the bottom, wash thoroughly, and pop them into a pot with a small amount of boiling water, adding seasoned salt and butter. (A different vegetable or a nice tossed salad would also go well with this type of meal.)

Now for the dessert. If you selected Jell-o, you can buy it already prepared, with or without fruit, at the supermarket. A little Cool Whip on top makes it so delightful. (Just a little; we know why, right?)

For those of you who selected the strawberry shortcake for dessert, I do envy you. Since you don't have to worry about calories, Meijer's bakery has a small pound cake that is moist and not too heavy. Frozen strawberries in the carton are inexpensive and very good. Add Cool Whip or whipped cream, whatever your choice may be.

Since the main ingredient is TLC, I'm sure that the family will enjoy.

If you have a simple recipe for our busy readers or a hint that could make "switchin' to the kitchen" easier, send it to "Tidbits by Myra," c/o The Romulus News, 11114 Sterling, Romulus, MI 48174. □

Point of Law

By Murray A. Duncan, Jr., Attorney

There is a way that a real-estate closing can take place even though title defects appear on the property. The parties can ask the title insurance company if they will "insure over" the title defects. Such insurance does not remove or eliminate the problem, but rather provides a source of payment if the insured party suffers a loss. The purchaser would not have to accept "insurance over" a title defect, however, the purchaser may decide to accept such insurance in order to close the transaction.

The insurance company will usually "insure over" a title defect if the chance of loss is remote. For example, the insurance company may be familiar with the utility that holds an easement on property that a garage is on. The insurance company may figure that the utility company will never require the owner of the property to remove the garage.

Other times, insurance is provided because the party responsible for clearing up the title agrees to pay the insurance company if the company must pay for any loss. A purchaser should find out why an insurance company is willing to "insure over" a problem. The purchaser may not want to accept the "insurance over" if the title defect is too serious.

If you have a legal question that you would like answered, you may send your question to my office and I will attempt to address it in a future issue. Questions should be mailed to: Murray A. Duncan, Jr., 10000 South Wayne Road, Romulus, Michigan 48174. □

Port Side

By Captain Ron Dubsky, Ice Breaker II Sport Fishing Charters

By the time you read this article, I should have my walleye for 1991 cleaned and in the freezer! April is my favorite time to catch Mr. Big Eye. The truth is, April is the only month that Yours Truly catches fish for his freezer! My charters begin May 1 and I don't put any more fish in my freezer until September.

The tackle I use is a five-foot, light-action rod; a spinning reel with eight-pound test and a one-half-ounce to three-eighths-ounce lead-head jig with a Mister Twister work well. Also, I tip the jig with a minnow, hooked through the tail with a stinger hook (a very small treble hook) attached to the jig. Colors: chartreuse or white. Location: the Detroit River in plain view of the Ambassador Bridge. (Take Outer Drive to West Jefferson; go north into River Rouge. Find the Industrial Park on the East Side; go into the park to Belanger Drive and follow this to the River. You will find parking for 20 cars and a pretty good launch site.)

Start fishing right outside the launch area. The current will push your drift south past Great Lakes Steel. When you pass the marina, start your boat, head back to the launch site, and start your drift again. I have had very good luck just inside the large piling by the water outlet just south of the launch. Concentrate on this area. I have taken steelhead from there also. You will be fishing in 10 to 20 feet; let the jig go to the bottom, take up the slack, and start jigging from the last two feet. Most of your strikes will come on the fall. If the wind is calm, your drift will be perfect; if the wind picks up out of the north, you may have to backtroll.

Remember: At the beginning of this article, I talked about catching Mr. Big Eye. Try and release Mrs. Big Eye so she can continue her spawn!

This report comes from South Street Tackle in Belleville.

Ford and Belleville lakes were very productive during what little ice season we had. Limits of crappies from Belleville Lake were regular. Ford Lake anglers did not seem to catch as many fish, but the size was tremendous — 14-inch perch, nine- to 10-inch bluegills and 10- to 12-inch crappies.

Right now, people are gearing up for the spring run of walleyes and suckers up the river behind the Ford Lake Dam. All we really need is a week of 50-degree weather or better.

As for an overview of 1990, Belleville was fantastic in the bass-fishing department; with the explosion of the shad population, the bass became extremely large toward the end of the season. Three- to four-pound fish were not uncommon. Crank baits and jigs seemed to be most anglers' choice.
